A competition that dates back since the first A-10s arrived at D-M took place at Davis-Monthan Jan. 25 when three teams participated in the base's annual load-crew competition.

Each team, consisting of three members, is evaluated on different categories, to include inspections on their uniforms, tool kits and their overall knowledge of weapons loading.

"The competitors are evaluated on four aspects during the competition: dress and appearance, a written test, an inspection on their composite tool kits and loading an A-10 with six MK-82s and one AIM-9," said Tech. Sgt. Mikel Petersen, 355th Maintenance Group loading standardization crew member.

The competition isn't just a timed event, each category is given a point scale and the winners get more than just bragging rights.

"How well they do in each category determines how many points they receive," Sergeant Petersen said. "The crew with the most points at the end

Airmen: First on the scene

By Capt. Nathan D. Broshear
12th Air Force Public Affairs

On my way to work the other day, I saw a minor car accident.

A sedan full of teenagers slammed into the bumper of a Lincoln Towncar, driven by an elderly gentleman. Immediately, a uniformed Airman leapt from his truck to provide aid.

After checking on the occupants of each vehicle, the Airman began to direct traffic and assist the victims in calling for emergency services. It took only minutes out of his commute, but to these citizens — he was a hero for the day.

This is the third time I've witnessed such an occurrence. At other times, Airmen have impressed those around them by saving citizens choking at a restaurant or bringing home a wayward child. On each occasion, an Airman was the first (and sometimes only) person to stop and render assistance.

It isn't only on freeways and dining rooms that Airmen are first on the scene.

In Afghanistan, combat controllers were some of the first military members, in country, to direct incoming forces. In Iraq, Airmen flying RC-135 Rivet Joint aircraft have set records for their unit deployments — first arriving in the Middle East in 1990 and still flying. Nearly every disaster in recent history has had Air Force aircraft arriving within hours to escort rescue workers, secure supply routes or deliver much-needed provisions.

Are Air Force core values the reason Airmen are so apt to care for their fellow citizens? Or are those who live by the Air Force's core values more likely to join and remain Airmen?

I prefer to think it's a combination of the two: Airmen are citizens so filled with the spirit of service that they would likely help others no matter what career field they choose.

As a group, we're fortunate to be blessed with ranks full of members living with integrity, service and excellence.

People notice when you care.

During a flight to Baltimore-Washington Airport, an Airman gave a flight attendant a particular brand of skateboarding T-shirts after she told him the brand was her son's favorite and she'd been trying to locate one similar. The woman was so touched by the simple act of kindness, she felt compelled to tell the world about the Airman's generosity and wrote a letter to the editor that appeared in the Dec.

26, 2007 edition of USA Today. In her letter, she noted how his actions made a lasting impression about "the caliber of men and women who are selflessly sacrificing their lives so that Americans can have freedom and peace."

While you don't have to donate the shirt off your back, you make a big impression on every person you interact with even while off duty. Airmen are the standard by which friends, neighbors, government and motorists will judge others.

In 2008, let's keep up the tradition of being "first on the scene" ... whether it's during a deployment, at home, on base or in the community.

Our nation and our world have come to expect we'll be there for them in times of crisis. I know you won't let them down.

This year's teams, which were the winners of the previous quarterly competitions, consisted of two teams from the 354th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron and one team from the 358th AMXS.

The annual load-crew competition is not only a time for recognition but also a very important training opportunity for the load-crew members.

"Our load competitions are important to our weapons community," said Lt. Col. Lee Bridges, 355th AMXS commander. "First, it promotes the pursuit of excellence while showcasing our weapons loaders to the entire group. Secondly, we are able to practice a vital combat skill."

Arizona's Heroes to Hometowns Program, which helps severely injured servicemembers and their families reconnect with their hometown or new community, held a meeting at D-M for the first time Jan. 29.

Kathy Pearce, Arizona Heroes to Hometowns coordinator, led a working group to raise awareness and educate local organizations on the benefits of the program during a luncheon at The Mirage Officers' Club.

"Our goal is to facilitate successful community reintegration," she said. "We also want to restore the highest-functioning quality of life and assist in meeting the long-term needs of the severely-injured war veterans."

Colonel Kent Laughbaum, 355th Fighter Wing commander, attended the event and lauded its mission.

"On behalf of America's Airmen stationed here in Tucson, thank you for your friendship and support to our American War Heroes," he said. "Your supportive words and strong handshake are priceless and essential to ensuring that we accomplish our mission."

Some of the benefits Heroes to Hometowns offers include:

- Help with paying bills
- Finding suitable homes and adapting as needed
- Adapting vehicles
- Transportation to medical appointments
- Finding jobs and providing educational assistance
- Child-care support
- Arranging welcome-home celebrations
- Help working through bureaucracy and obtaining government benefits and entitlements
- Sports and recreation opportunities
- Holiday dinners

Troops to receive retroactive pay next month

By John J. Kruzel
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON (AFPN) — Active duty troops will receive retroactive earnings next month, followed weeks later by a supplemental payday for non-active personnel, a Pentagon official said.

The National Defense Authorization Act signed into law Monday by President Bush stipulates a 3.5 percent military pay raise. This hike is 0.5 percent higher than an executive order the president signed Dec. 28, 2007 to increase pay by 3 percent, which took effect Jan 1.

In mid-February, Defense Finance and Accounting Service officials will pay active-duty servicemembers the extra 0.5 percent raise earned since the start of 2008. Non-active members will receive the supplement "a couple weeks later," said Bill Carr, deputy undersecretary for military personnel policy.

Mr. Carr said Pentagon officials are "delighted" with the act and praised cooperation by Congress. Disagreement between the president and Congress over non-defense-related earmarks and controversial language about the Iraq war had delayed the bill's enactment.

"I think it's good news for everybody in uniform," Mr. Carr said. "This Congress has been terrific in working with us in terms of providing to the troops the things that they need."

Between 2000 and 2007, private-sector pay increased by 29 percent, while military pay jumped 42 percent during the same time, Mr. Carr said. Meanwhile, wages paid to noncommissioned officers, which includes corporals and all grades of sergeant and petty officer, spiked by about 52 percent.

"We've made considerable headway, in terms of increasing the value of military pay, to the point where we're now frankly in about the 70th or 80th percentile of similarly educated American earners," Mr. Carr said.

He noted that the most recent raise, by virtue of exceeding the current inflation rate, will increase servicemember recipients' purchasing power.

Pentagon Press Secretary Geoff Morrell said the retroactive payments ensure "that our forces are compensated commensurate to their service and sacrifice."

In a news conference at the Pentagon, Mr. Morrell noted that troops will benefit in various ways by provisions codified in the act.

"It lets us resume offering bonuses to new recruits and re-enlisting troops," he said.

The act also includes funding to improve health care and benefits for wounded troops and veterans.

The bill became law just a week before the next budget cycle begins, as President Bush sends his fiscal 2009 request to Capitol Hill. That budget proposal, along with a request for $70 billion in emergency-war spending, will be delivered to Congress Sunday.

Heritage Park gets face-lift

Airmen 1st Class David Lopez, right, and Kevin Hetzler, both 355th Equipment Maintenance Squadron sheet-metal journeymen, sand down an old A-10 at Heritage Park Jan. 25. All nine planes at the park will receive restoration over the next few months to get ready for the 355th Fighter Association 65th Annual Reunion April 24 to 27.

By Staff Sgt. Tim Beckham
355th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

Heritage Park is getting an extreme makeover during the next few months to spruce up the planes that call the park home.

The repairs to the nine aircraft, located at Heritage Park, are scheduled to receive restoration over the next four months.

"We're doing a full restoration of the birds and basically making them look pretty," said Staff Sgt. Colt Peterson, 355th Equipment Maintenance Squadron sheet metal technician and project coordinator. "The planes will be sanded, all dry rot will be fixed and the planes will be repainted."

The planes, which have not had a face-lift in nine years, should take about two weeks each to restore with a full crew, according to Sergeant Peterson.

"Today, we will also have 10 retirees out here helping with the process," Sergeant Peterson said.

The primary reason the planes are being updated is for the 355th Fighter Association's 65th Annual Reunion April 24 to 27.

"The Air Park is one of the most important ways for the Air Force to showcase our history and advancements over time," said Col. Dennis Shumaker, 355th Maintenance Group commander. "As such it's open for all to see and enjoy and it, therefore, must look good and more importantly be preserved for generations to come. The truly remarkable thing is that 80 percent of the work is being accomplished by volunteers, both active-duty and retired. This displays how proud we as Airmen are of our past."

Going Green

INITIATIVE

Story and photos by Kristi LaBonte
Desert Lightning News Photojournalist

The Inn on Davis-Monthan has implemented a "Going Green" initiative, using employee teamwork and guest participation, in their commitment to help protect the earth's natural resources.

"This is a large operation," said Daniel A. Baker, 355th Services Squadron lodging manager. "It is considered a large lodging operation, because it is over 285 rooms. There are 300 rooms here in this hotel. We always had a program, but it was small in scope. Most importantly, we didn't feel like we were doing our part," Mr. Baker said. "We all sat down, brain-stormed and said 'what can we do here?'"

Those working at the Inn have had a recycling paper operation for years, due to the large amount of paper waste that was generated. They have also been recycling the large amounts of cardboard products.

They felt that, while they generate a lot of recyclable items, they needed the help of their guests in expanding the lodging's efforts in Going Green.

The Inn recently purchased recycle bins for all of the rooms and are encouraging their guests to put plastic bottles, glass bottles and aluminum cans in the new bins.

"We are encouraging folks when they check in, by letting them know that we do recycle here, and it's up to them; but we'd like them to be a part of the recycling program," Mr. Baker said.

He said that a lot of the guests were enthusiastic about the recycling portion of the program.

When asked his feelings about the Inn's initiatives, guest Gabe Parker, (Ret.) Air Force hospital administrator said, "We gotta do that, or else, pretty soon there will be nothing left ... We are the starters, the rest of the world can follow."

David Ruiz, housekeeping and maintenance manager at the Inn, said prior to getting the recycle bins, guests would ask if we recycled. Employees would then take the recyclable items and distribute to their proper bins on base.

"I think it's a wonderful idea," Mr. Ruiz said. "When you take a look at the landfills and where they are going, you hear about the problems they have with the ground water, I think this is great. It creates jobs in recycling and puts stuff back into use."

"We even have an electric car. It's a wonderful thing. We never have to put gas in it, we just charge it up and then we go," Mr. Ruiz said.

Certified Housekeeper Cecilia Martinez noticed a big difference in the amount of trash collected from the rooms over the very first weekend that the recycle bins appeared in the rooms.

Another part of their program is reducing the amount of energy used. Employees are turning off unnecessary lighting as well as reducing the level at which they set the thermostats.

"Every night, the lead maintenance person has a checklist that they go through and make sure that all unnecessary lighting is off," Mr. Baker said. "Through self-help and with the support of the civil engineers on base, we've installed light switches that illuminate, allowing the guest to turn on the switch-activated lamp before entering the room."

Certified Housekeeper Cecilia Martinez lowers the room temperature in an effort to reduce energy consumption at The Inn on Davis-Monthan Tuesday.

The Inn has changed about 70 percent of their light bulbs to energy-efficient bulbs, saving them money by lowering their energy use. The energy-efficient bulbs also last longer.

They are also using green-tipped fluorescent bulbs, which are environmentally-friendly, verses the silver-tipped, which contain the mercury gas.

There are 50 Temporary Lodging Facilities, which are 93 percent occupied year-round, according to Mr. Baker. The Air Force has invested in the beginnings of a ground-source heat pump, using water as a natural source. This will replace all the heating and cooling systems in all 50 facilities.

Using Project Planets conservation tips, guests are helping the Inn by reusing their linens and towels, saving the Inn an estimated 70,000 gallons of water and 500 gallons of detergent annually, according to the Project Planet Web site (<http://www.projectplanetcorp.com>.)

Two test drillings have proven the necessary under-ground water supply is there, ready for near-future well drillings. The Inn is now in the design phase awaiting funding for this family quarters project.

"It's a step in the right direction as far as the base is concerned," Mr. Baker said. "They are always looking for projects that can reduce the amount of energy that we consume here."

"We figure, we're going green like everybody else. We're just trying to do our part to save those resources," Mr. Baker added.

Mr. Baker was surprised by the support of his employees.

"Rather than looking at it as another task, they really embraced the idea, even questioning why they had waited so long to implement the program (in the first place), he said.

Mr. Ruiz said, "We're new at this, but we're excited. We talked about going green, and to actually be doing it, is a good feeling. The biggest gratitude is the guests, they're the ones noticing it."

He said the initiative has already started a rippling effect where some of the employees have even initiated the same practices in their own homes.

One maintenance man even called the city of Tucson to request a recycle bin for his home. In reply to his request, they mailed a letter thanking him for his efforts in helping in the community recycling effort.

In November of 2007, the patriotic club volunteered their time to support the Tee It Up for the Troops charity golf event and raised funds for the Wounded Warrior Project, which prompted 355th Fighter Wing Commander, Col. Kent Laughbaum, to invite the group to Davis-Monthan for a tour. The students also saw several other aircraft on the flight line and toured the 309th Aerospace Maintenance and Regeneration Group.

Military Refund Anticipation Loan ("MRAAL") is provided by MetLife Bank, N.A. and is offered only at participating H&R Block offices. Loan amounts (including RAL fees, tax preparation fees and amounts distributed to the taxpayer) are from $1,000 to $7,500. MRAALs are subject to credit approval and proof of active military status of the taxpayer or spouse. Borrowers must not have outstanding obligations that might reduce their tax refund. The APR and Military APR are both set under 26%. For an MRAAL with a $3,000 amount financed, a single payment of approximately $2,032.50 would be due on demand or when the federal income tax refund is received. From the date a tax return is filed, it typically takes one business day to fund an MRAAL and 15 days for the refund to be paid. The expected average duration for the MRAAL is 11 days. A Refund Account fee and a Finance Charge are charged by the lender. Those who e-file with direct deposit without taking a RAL typically receive their federal income tax refund in 8-14 days.

Mission Spotlight:

Tech. Sgt. Lonnie Noah, 355th Security Forces Squadron member, critiques the firing accuracy and technique of Tech. Sgt. Gardner Jones, 355th Civil Engineer Squadron unit deployment manager, Jan. 15.

Members

The team consists of 258 military, 28 civilians and 43 contracted gate guards and staff.

Mission

The 355th SFS supports world-wide force protection and security to include local alert fighter operations, seven flying squadrons, 4,400 tactical and stored aircraft spread over 13,000 acres, worth $32.3 billion. The squadron also provides police services for an 18,000-member base populace and combat arms training for more than 6,000 military personnel. The 355th SFS also provides K-9 Military Working Dog support throughout the region in support of explosive and narcotic detection missions. It also supports pre-deployment Expeditionary Combat Skills Training for all AEF tasked Airmen on D-M and deploys 225 personnel per Air Expeditionary Force cycle.

Recent Accomplishments

- Unit is home to four Bronze Star winners and just welcomed home its first Combat Action Badge recipient.
- Provided Combatant Commander with 163 trained security forces warriors; astonishing 71 percent of assigned members were deployed in 2007
- Sent team to Baghdad International Zone, provided law and order for more than 50,000 people while encountering more than 300 rocket/mortar attacks
- Sent 63 members to Camp Bucca, Iraq; provided detainee operations for more than 13,000 suspected terrorist detainees
- Supported base defense/entry control and Joint Defense Operations Center operations at Kirkuk Air Base, Iraq with 38 battle tested hard-chargers who participated in more than 50 combat patrols
- Executed Davis-Monthan Ready to Deploy Training--40 classes; 828 base personnel prepared for war
- Deployed two security forces experts to Chile--taught Air Base Defense concepts to 180 Chilean security forces; praised by Chilean air force commander
- Jerry Conner won Resource Advisor of the year--currently competing at Air Force level
- Tech. Sgt. Jeff Ward was honored as 2007 Son's of the American Revolution Outstanding Law Enforcement Officer of the Year
- Air Combat Commands DoD Employee with a Disability Award — Brian Kolfage

Vision Statement

Strong, steady and ready to provide peerless security force protection and flexible combat support both at home and abroad.

"Truly the term 'cops' no longer applies to us, for good or bad, accepted or not we are the Air Force's infantry and as our mission evolves, terms like police work and law enforcement transform into security and integrated base defense. But at our core the security forces career field varies very little from our predecessors in the military police, air police or security police and that is to detect, delay and destroy our enemy.

"I am proud of this career field and the men and women who serve in this unit. They exemplify a warrior spirit that as a commander I can only hope to encourage and not extinguish. But for me, serving in security forces means loving what I do and feeling that it matters everyday. How could anything be more fun? Hooah!"

'Commit to be Fit' program starts today

By Chris Sweeney
355th Services Squadron

Davis-Monthan personnel looking for an extra push to kick-off their personal fitness program for 2008 can look to the D-M Fitness and Sports Center for a little help.

The 2008 'Commit to be Fit' program starts today. The program is designed to encourage everyone to make fitness a part of their New Year's resolution and everyday lifestyle.

"The Commit to be Fit program is important for many different reasons," said Mr. Cesar Vinueza, Fitness Center Director. "It encourages participants to get into a more consistent and well-balanced cardiovascular routine, they have the option to select between five different modes of cardio training, and they have the capability to track their progress."

"This is an incentive based program where participants receive prizes for reaching certain goals throughout the program," Mr. Vinueza said. "The primary goal and ultimate benefit however is to have healthier and fit personnel."

According to the Commit to be Fit guide, the program can be utilized by participants of any age who log their cardio workouts on exercise cards available at the front desk. The five approved exercises for the program are: swimming, running, biking, walking, and elliptical machines. The points and prizes for individuals who reach the following goals are: 100 points - stop watch; 175 points - exercise band; 250 points - pedometer.

D-M club member wins Super Bowl trip for two Master Sgt. Walter Chapman, 357th Aircraft Maintenance Unit, is all smiles after finding out he won an all-expenses-paid trip for two to Super Bowl XLII in Glendale, Ariz. On hand to congratulate Sergeant Chapman were Col. Kent Laughbaum, 355th Fighter Wing commander and Sherry Jones, Desert Oasis Enlisted Club manager. Sergeant Chapman and his son Tehvon, 16, headed up to Phoenix on Thursday in a free rental car he opted for over airline tickets. "Why fly," Sergeant Chapman said. "The Super Bowl is right up the road this year, plus Tehvon and I are planning on having a great time making the drive up there. He's so excited he can't wait to get there." Sergeant Chapman is one of only four people, Air Force wide, to win the tickets through the Air Force Clubs Football Frenzy promotion. Along with the tickets and travel, each winner receives lodging accommodations at Luke Air Force Base, a rental car, National Football League Experience tickets, and limousine service to and from official events during the six-day trip. "All I did was attend Monday Night Football games at the club," Sergeant Chapman said. "I went in after class and made sure I filled out an entry form every time. I'm so glad the club was on top of their game too, because they were so prompt about sending in the entry forms every week. I want to pass along a big thank you to Sherry Jones and all of the club staff." Football Frenzy 2008 resumes at the Desert Oasis in September.

exercise card this allows them to gauge their progress and even compare how they are doing this year versus last year,” Mr. Vinueza said. “What makes this program unique is the fact that the participant has a lot more than just one choice of activity to reach their goal, also the participants do not have to perform these activities at the base fitness center for them to count, they can do them at home or at an off-base facility or squadron fitness room.”

“Commit to be Fit is designed strictly to improve cardiovascular fitness,” Mr. Vinueza said. “But we encourage all participants to compliment their cardio program with a strength training program. Cross-training is the key to any well-rounded health and fitness program.”

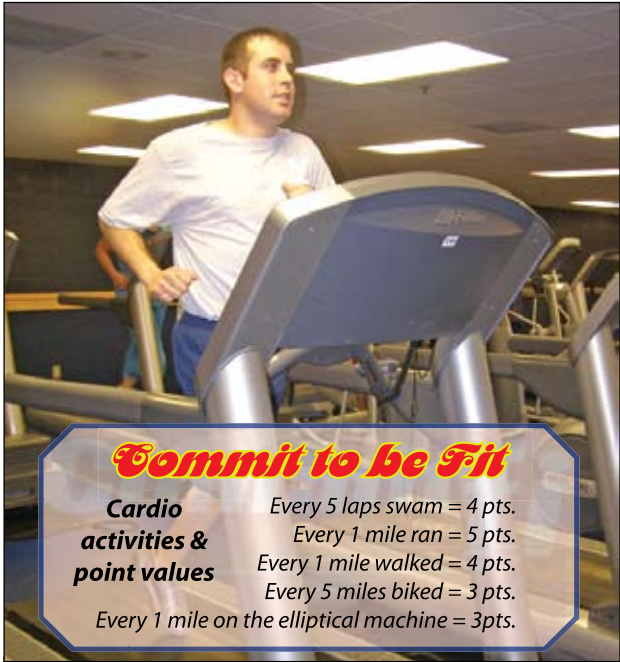

According to Mr. Vinueza, a well-rounded exercise program consists of three key components: cardiovascular, strength and flexibility training. Cardiovascular training should be done an average of 3 days per week for 20 to 30 minutes; strength training 2 to 3 days per week for 30 to 45 minutes. Properly stretching before and after each exercise session should take care of the flexibility portion of your exercise program.

“These are basic guidelines for health and fitness,” Mr. Vinueza said. “Individuals involved in high-level training or competition will naturally train more often and at higher intensity and duration.”

The Commit to be Fit program runs until Apr. 30. Personnel can sign up by picking up an exercise card at the front desk of either fitness center.

For more information, stop by the Haeffner Fitness Center or D-M Fitness and Sports Center or call 228-0022.

Senior Airman James Tarone, 355th Services Squadron, gets his cardio workout on one of the fitness center's treadmills. According to fitness center staff, cardiovascular training is an integral portion of an exercise regime. Cardiovascular training has been proven to decrease the risk of heart disease, decrease blood pressure, increase energy level, decrease cholesterol levels, and improve overall quality of life.

Master Sgt. Max Rippel, 755th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron, executes some 'seated chest presses' in the fitness center's strength training room. Master Sgt. Rippel integrates his strength training regimen with a weekly cardio program for a well-rounded fitness routine. According to fitness center staff, strength training increases muscular strength and endurance and helps to increase bone mineral density (bone health), strengthen tendons and ligaments and helps to slow down loss of muscle mass. In addition to strength and cardio training, a flexibility training program is an important component of any exercise regime.

'Salute to hospitalized Veterans'

By Pepe Mendoza
SAVAHCS Public Affairs

The Southern Arizona Veterans Administration Health Care System and the Tucson Community will celebrate the 33rd Annual National Salute to Hospitalized Veterans Feb. 13 and 14.

The celebration gives everyone a chance to let those who have given the Nation so much, know that they are not forgotten", said SAVAHC Director, Jonathan H. Gardner.

"We've invited local celebrities, elected officials, school children and others to visit during the week. We want people of all ages to bring the Valentine cheer to our patients."

Citizens, young and old, are once again sending Valentine's Day greeting cards and letters to VA medical centers across the country, simply addressed "Dear Veteran." Mr. Gardner said that these greeting cards and letters will be distributed to patients throughout the centers.

Mr. Gardner said he hopes visitors will also learn more about the important role our volunteers play at the medical centers throughout the year, and perhaps even pursue volunteer opportunities themselves.

"Our medical center's estimated 1,400 plus volunteers are an integral part of our health-care team, and the National Salute program is a great way for people to learn more about helping the veterans we serve," Mr. Gardner said.

"We hope that individuals and groups will join us during these days, to give special recognition to these men and women."

The Thursday – Feb. 13 program will go from 5:30 p.m. until 8 p.m.; the Friday – Feb. 14 program will go from 12:30 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Both programs will begin with a short briefing for all participants in the R.E. Lindsey Jr. Auditorium prior to the patient visitations.

For further media information, or assistance call Pepe' Mendoza at the SAVAHC Public Affairs Office at (520) 629-1819.

3-Time Tour de France Champion and Tour de Cure Honorary Chairperson

“When I won the Tour de France I had one goal in mind... THE FINISH LINE. Now I’m riding for an even greater goal—a cure for diabetes.

Just 30 minutes a day of riding your bike—or any other form of physical activity can help reduce your risk of developing type 2 diabetes.

Ride with me in the American Diabetes Association’s Tour de Cure.”
